ocean greyness

for solo clarinet was completed in May 2003, and first performed by Paul Todd, during a Melbourne Composers' League concert at the Retro Café, Fitzroy, Melbourne, Australia on 1st June 2003.

The title refers to a 1953 painting by Jackson Pollock, currently exhibited at the Guggenheim Museum in New York:

Ocean Greyness, one of Pollock's last great works, depicts several disembodied eyes hidden within the swirling colored fragments that materialize from the dense, scumbled gray ground. "When you are painting out of your unconscious," he claimed, "figures are bound to emerge." Manifest in this painting is a dynamic tension between representation and abstraction that, finally, constitutes the core of Pollock's multileveled oeuvre.

Performance notes

Accidentals apply throughout the bar unless cancelled by another accidental, and only in the octave in which they occur.

Trills are to the note a semi-tone above the main note.

Duration: About 5 minutes

The current version of the score was prepared in 2022, and contains minor revisions. Versions of the piece also exist for bass clarinet and contrabass clarinet (commissioned by Harry Sparnaay).
